The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it was, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

The Meeting of Two Of Fate's Currents.

[Original.]

A woman lay dying. No one was with her except her son, a boy of ten years. She looked at a shelf over a fireplace and tried to speak. The boy, knowing she wished to speak of something on the shelf, took up various articles on it, at every one of which his mother gave a negative sign till he came to a small lacquered box, at which she began to mutter. He took down the box, went to the bedside, put his ear close to her lips and tried to distinguish what she wished to say to him. But he failed. The mother died before she could make herself understood.

After all was over and the dead had been laid away the little fellow closely examined the lacquered box. It was locked, and he had no key to open it. Taking it to a locksmith, he procured a key and unlocked the box, but found it empty.

The boy was left with nothing and was obliged to make his own living. The few articles of furniture were sold, realizing only a few dollars. His home had always been in the country, and he sought an abiding place and work on a farm.

Farmer Simpson agreed to take him. He was to do chores and such light farm work as a boy of his age might be able to do, such as feeding the stock, milking the cows and weeding. He was permitted to go to school for a portion of each day, though this was for his employer's as well as his own benefit, for little Belle Simpson, seven years old, was sent to school, and the boy was her protector over the two miles between the farm and the schoolhouse.

And so Benny Rengeralt grew up the protector of a child who came to be a woman. Strange that her father should not have expected that the two would pass from the friendship of childhood to the love of youth. In truth, he never realized that his daughter had grown to womanhood till after it was too late. Then when he began to consider which one of the neighboring well to do farmers' sons she would take for a husband he discovered that she and Ben were welded together. They might be parted, but it would be like tearing up two clinging plants by the roots.

Nevertheless he resolved to do so. Ben was twenty-two years old and had accumulated nothing. Indeed, he had never been paid anything to accumulate. He was told to go, and there seemed nothing for him to do but get work as a farm hand wherever he might. But he had been an apt scholar and was fairly well educated. He resolved to go to the city and seek a business situation. When he parted from his sweetheart she told him that she would never marry unless at some future time she might marry him.

Five years passed. Ben was receiving a small salary. Neither he nor Belle had married, but Farmer Simpson was as inexorable as ever.

Fate works in strange grooves. While all this was passing one of her other currents was flowing on to meet the one recorded. One day a woman, seeing a red flag before a house, entered and found an auction. She bought several knicknacks, including an old lacquered box. It was coming to pieces, and she secured it for 15 cents.

Some months after this purchase one of Ben Rengeralt's friends called his attention to a personal advertisement which concerned him. It said that if he would call at a certain street and number of a certain town he would hear something to his advantage. He was naturally very much surprised and went at once to the place designated. He was received by an elderly lady.

"Are you Benjamin Rengeralt?" she asked.

"I am."

"Did you ever see that box?" pointing.

Ben looked at the box.

"No," he said. "I never saw it before."

She saw that he was endeavoring to recall something and gave him time. That quick springing plant memory had taken root in his brain, and while seconds were being ticked away it was growing. It had been excited by the box, which he had not seen for nearly twenty years. Again it stood on the shelf over the fireplace. Then he saw his mother looking toward it, her efforts to tell him something concerning it, her failure.

"Yes," he said. "It belonged to my mother. When she was dying she tried to tell me something about it, but her voice failed her before she could do so. Where did you get it?"

"I bought it at an auction, intending to use it for trinkets. But it was coming to pieces, and I tried to glue it together. Failing in this, I tried to fasten it with nails. Under the hammering it broke apart and revealed a false bottom. See."

She took out the upper bottom and disclosed a small paper book with a number printed on the cover. She opened it and showed him his name. It was a savings bank book. There were deposits entered in it, the last having been made more than seventeen years before. The aggregate deposits were $3,000. The accumulated interest would amount to nearly twice as much more.

"It is yours," she said. "Doubtless your mother had long been saving it for you. I am glad to be the means of its return to you."

And so it was that the mother's intentions were carried out in time and when perhaps they did the most good. Ben married his sweetheart, invested his find in business and is now prosperous and happy.

HELEN W. WEED.

WHEN the DEACON CALLED.

[Copyright, 1908.]

About the time there was an escape from the asylum at Petersboro Farmer Gregg's sister, a widow, came for a visit. Mrs. Gregg proposed that they make a match between the widow and Deacon Watkins, and he was invited to call. One afternoon the farmer and his wife set out for town, leaving their guest all alone. This was the afternoon selected by Deacon Watkins for his call.

There were reasons why the deacon arrived at the Gregg homestead in a rather excited condition. He was kicked by one of his cows just before leaving home, one of the hogs got caught in the fence and had to be released, a stray bull that he encountered in the road ran him up a wild cherry tree, and in some of the adventures he lost a jackknife that used to belong to his grandfather. He was therefore more or less perturbed when he knocked at the kitchen door and then entered to find the widow asleep in the room beyond. He had turned to retreat when she awoke and uttered a scream at sight of him. She had been dreaming of that escaped lunatic. She had dreamed that he had his fingers on her throat and was choking her to death, and here he was before her! The deacon muttered his name and an apology, and the widow sat up. She had read and heard a great deal about lunatics and how they should be treated. This one didn't look very fierce, but she must be careful not to arouse him. She must be soft and gentle and dissembling. Therefore as soon as she could catch her breath she smilingly asked the deacon if he wouldn't sit down. He replied that he would and did. He didn't ask for the Greggs. Not seeing them about, he inferred that they had gone to town.

The widow had been told always to look a mad dog or a lunatic in the eye. As she kept her eyes on the deacon she read cunning, craft and cruelty in his face, and she realized that her life was at stake. It was rather embarrassing for the caller, but he talked about Indians, Canadian thistles, potato bugs and the weather and grew more at ease as the minutes slipped away. On her part the widow tried to be as entertaining, but it was hard work. The fear was constantly present that the lunatic would suddenly break out and rend her limb by limb. She was hysterical, but she didn't cease to smile. When the deacon finally got around to tell her of his trials and misfortunes he found a sympathetic listener. She had read that she must always pretend to sympathize with the insane, and she made the effort of her life. By and by her caller went further. He said that when his dear companion died he made up his mind never to marry again, but it was possible that he would change his mind if he met the right party. It was lonesome living all alone and having no one to pet. It was so lonesome that sometimes he went out and sought the companionship of the oxen.

The widow had been told that she must seem to agree with a lunatic, and she heaved a sigh and replied to the deacon by saying that when she had laid her Joseph 'neath the weeping willow she thought the light had gone out forever. Time had assuaged her grief and caused her to change her mind. She had come to feel that perhaps it was even her duty to marry again. She could cook, wash, bake, iron, make soft soap and all kinds of preserves, and for three years running her crazy quilts and rag carpets had taken first prizes at the county fair. The deacon then hinted that by hard work and industry he had accumulated about $8,000 worth of property. The widow saw his object and stated that her Joseph left her about that amount and she had increased it somewhat. As a matter of fact, she lied about it, but she had read that one must always lie to lunatics, and she didn't propose to provoke the one before her.

Deacon Watkins became interested. He admired. He would come again. If his lost relict was to be replaced, Indiana should have a fair chance in the race. He liked that smile. He liked that chatter. He liked a woman that could hustle with the housework and knew by instinct when a boiled dinner was ready to put on the table. He got up to go, and the widow felt that her life was saved. He lingered with his hand on the back of his chair, and her throat constricted. He might or might not have taken his leave as soon as he had finished telling her that he thought ailing humanity ought to drink more catnip tea when steps were heard outside. A hog buyer and a tin peddler had arrived in chorus. The widow cried, "Come in!" and they came, but the instant they entered she cried something else. Pointing to the deacon, she half shrieked:

"Secure him! He is an escaped lunatic!"

Then the deacon was thrown on his back and tied up with the clothesline and threatened with death, and, though he stuttered and stammered, no attention was paid to him. He was bundled into the drover's cart and jogged over to the asylum, and it was only then that any attention was paid to his remarks. When the Greggs returned and found out what had happened the farmer went over to see his neighbor. He found him sitting on the back doorstep with a lonesome look on his face.

"Oh, deacon, I have come over to say to you"— he began when the deacon looked up and carelessly interrupted with:

"Doggone it, you go to thunder!"

A BURMESE RAT TRAP.

The Rodents Will Eagerly Enter It and Cannot Get Out.

Rats may readily be induced to jump or drop into any receptacle, especially if it affords them adequate concealment, and they do this without one lingering suspicion of their inability to reach the only existing outlet when the time for retreat approaches.

Thus traps on this principle may readily be designed and are obviously preferable to our rat traps where the animals are numerous.

In Burma, where the rats are a perfect pest, they use a jar trap, which is thus described by a traveler:

"The common Pegu jar I used was about one and a half or two feet deep and fourteen or fifteen inches broad, and a hole was punched in the shoulder just large enough for a rat to enter.

"There was about six or seven inches of paddy (rice in husk) in the jar, which was then buried to within about eight inches of the top. The mouth of the jar was then closed with a board and a stone.

"A quantity of old timber joists and straw were in the outhouse and no end of rat holes everywhere around."

With this contrivance he caught seventy-two rats in one night. The rats can readily enter, but they cannot climb the smooth sides of the jar to escape.—London Family Herald.

A FIREPROOF TREE.

The Chaparro, One of South America's Natural Curiosities.

On the vast plains of Colombia and the north of South America, called savannas, which are parched with heat except during the rainy season, there is one of the greatest of natural curiosities, a tree called the chaparro, which is fireproof.

It is the custom of the Colombian herdsmen to clear the ground by means of fire for the new vegetation, which springs up so luxuriantly in these regions after the rainy season. But not even the intense heat of a prairie fire affects the chaparro tree. It survives the flames to afford a welcome shade in an otherwise treeless country.

It is a small tree, seldom growing to more than twenty feet in height, with a girth of about three feet. It owes its curious immunity from fire to the nature of its hard, thick bark. The bark lies on the trunk in loose layers, which do not readily conduct heat to the more delicate parts of the structure.

The natives believe that this tree grows only where gold is abundant in the soil below, and it certainly is common in auriferous districts.—Westminster Gazette.

False Hair.

False hair was first regularly worn in England by Queen Elizabeth, who had upward of fifty wigs of different kinds for her private use. After her death a few women adopted the French fashion of wearing wigs, but it was not until the restoration that wigs, or, more correctly speaking, periwigs, came to be extensively worn by the sterner sex. These were introduced in the court of Louis XIV., where a natural head of hair was not considered sufficiently luxuriant for the artificial tastes of the times. The term "periwig" is a corruption of the French perruque. Wigs were originally adopted not as a remedy for baldness, but in the interest of personal cleanliness. The laws of ancient Egypt compelled all males to shave the head and beard. This explains why turbans were not worn by the Egyptians, the bushy artificial hair being regarded as a sufficient protection against the heat of the sun. The Romans, on the contrary, wore wigs because they were naturally bald.—St. Louis Republic.

What Displeased Him.

Two hunters were making their way across a lush meadow after a rain. The ground was moist and soggy, but their feet by quick stepping could be prevented from sinking more than ankle deep.

Suddenly the one in advance disappeared up to his neck in a narrow stream that, owing to the luxuriant growth on the bank, he had observed only as he stepped into it. With difficulty he pulled himself out and began wringing the water from his garments.

"Well, darn a country," he remarked, with feeling, "where they set their creeks up edgewise and hide 'em in the grass."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Dreamers.

There was never so much need for real dreamers as there is today. The business man, caring only for "his beef, his beer and his pew in eternity," will laugh scornfully and want to know how his balance sheet would appear did he give way to dreaming, forgetting that his operations originated years ago in the vaguest visions; also that happiness is not a necessary compliment of a heavy cash box.—London Academy.

Can't Afford Him Now.

Lily Bell—No, Rufus, Ah cain't marry yo' jest yet awhile. Y'll hab to wait. Rufus—Why for mus' I wait, Lily Bell? Lily Bell—'Cause three of the families maumy washes for done quit her, an' now she sca'cely makes 'nough to support me an' paw.—Judge.

The Source Told All.

"What'd Jimmy give yer fer yer birthday?"

"This here brass ring."

"How'd yer know it ain't nothin' but brass?"

"He give it ter me."—Cleveland Leader.

There are nettles everywhere but the smooth, green grasses are more common still.—Mrs. Browning.

Bryan the Standard Bearer of Democracy

William Jennings Bryan, as was foreseen weeks ago, is to be the Democratic standard bearer in the great national contest to be fought out at the polls next November to chose a successor to President Roosevelt. He was nominated on the first ballot in the Denver Convention at 3 o'clock yesterday morning and if the enthusiasm displayed by the unterrified in that convention the past few days is a criterion to go by it is certain that the Bryan adherents are confident of his election this Fall even if nobody else is.

The platform upon which the Democratic nominee stands differs but little from that adopted by the Republicans at the Chicago Convention last month. There is little to chose from between the two. This being the case, and that, too, for the first time in the history of our Presidential elections, the contest will be narrowed down as to the peculiar fitness of the opposing candidates to carry out the policies enunciated in the platforms of the two great political parties.

William H. Taft, the Republican nominee, ought to carry his full party strength, and undoubtedly will do so, as he is in every way better fitted to handle the great problems which confront our country to-day than Mr. Bryan, who is as yet an untried statesman and diplomat. Mr. Taft, on the other hand, has had wide experience in statecraft and can be relied upon to carry out the policies of President Roosevelt upon his retirement next March, and logically he will be his successor.

However, there is nothing absolutely certain in this world and particularly is this so in a political sense. In the approaching Presidential campaign, as in all previous national contests, the Republican party, notwithstanding its strength, has the "silent vote" to contend with. Never can a positive claim be set up by either party to the erratic ballot of the silent voter. In 1884 this elusive vote went to Grover Cleveland and landed him in the Presidential chair. In 1888 the ballot that does not talk until it is counted, went to Harrison, and in 1892 the vagrant again placed Cleveland in the White House. In the Presidential contest of four years ago this uncertain vote went to Theodore Roosevelt with a rush, as did most of the other votes for that matter.

Now, that the platforms of the two parties are builded with planks that brings them closer together than ever before in the matter of principles, it will be interesting to know what influence this blending of platforms will have on the "silent vote." Logically, as stated at the outset of this article, Wm H. Taft of Ohio will be the successful candidate, but he must secure this vote to "get there." Can he do it? We think he can.

A Provident People And Race Suicide.

According to the standpoint of a prominent member of the American Sociological Society the great question of race supremacy which in this country is being jeopardized by race suicide hinges principally upon the settlement of the class struggle and that much underlined phrase, "equal chance." In other words, we have been forced to realize that big families are impracticable with the times, which have bred a generation of ambitious men and women who refuse to fall readily into the ranks of the poor where large families would force them and who for the sake of future generations will not make their immediate progeny endure the modern struggle for existence. The gentleman in question sets forth, in a recent publication, the danger which confronts us because of the eventual swamping of the higher types by those who keep out their numbers despite quality and with utter disregard to living according to any high standard. Race suicide, from whatever cause, while improving immediate conditions, is a colossal menace according to many great authorities on the subject, for it is predicted that with the continuance of the falling off of a desirable population the prolific inferior will descend upon the reduced ranks of the highly civilized and quantity will grapple with quality and rule the world.

If we can believe the writer who claims that this problem of race suicide is the deliberate voluntary effort of our people to better their conditions by limiting the number which must struggle for their share of daily bread there is some hope for us, for while curtailing the population to meet the present exigencies we are also striving to increase the loaves to better conditions—to make real that equal chance which will enable us to rear large and desirable families, the future recruits of a great and superior people. We are not satisfied with race suicide. It is a necessary evil. We are not sitting idly by content with this order of things. We aim and are striving to perpetuate this great race of ours, but we want the restoration and assurance of the right conditions first. Those conditions we are fighting for. It is the struggle of the hour.

The wishes of the people in this direction have been voiced by President Roosevelt. The average man is not satisfied. Our high standards have spoiled him for poverty. He must live, not simply exist. "He is restless, ambitious. He wants civil, political and industrial equality. Thus we see the growth of labor organizations, the spread of populists and socialists, who demand new rights and a greater share in the products of labor. "Such is the meaning of the demand for trust and railroad legislation, such the significance of the insurance investigation, such the effort to curb the power of men like Rockefeller, Harriman, Morgan."

There is no real danger involved in this curtailment of our numbers, for the day is not far distant when we will have solved the problem of living and of living so well that big families will again be welcome and every member will be well nourished, well raised and equipped to become good members of society, healthy and powerful competitors for the world's supremacy. We are working the problem out and while it is being threshed we must endure. Yet the end is inevitable and men are wholly conscious of those inalienable rights—life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

SHOCKING ENDING OF A. J. VAN EVERY

Old Pioneer Accidentally Sets Clothes on Fire—Burns and Shock Cause Death.

Andrew J. Van Every, for sixty years a resident of California and who had lived forty-six of those years in Sonoma, is dead. The immediate cause of death was the result of burns received by accidentally setting his clothes on fire with a lighted candle last Monday night.

The deceased, who was eighty-four years of age, had long been in second childhood and was a helpless invalid. He and his aged wife lived alone in their little cottage on Spain street. Late Monday night while roaming around the house his clothes caught fire from a lighted candle which he carried in his hand. Too feeble mentally as well as physically to cope with his flaming garments he was badly burned about his arms and upper part of the body before his wife discovered his plight and came to his aid and prevented him from being incinerated alive.

The burns he received, however, were so severe that they proved fatal in his enfeebled condition and the old pioneer passed away Wednesday night.

A. J. Van Every, who was born in Michigan in 1824, came to California in 1848, and in 1852 he located in Sonoma and had resided here continuously ever since.

The deceased leaves an aged wife but no children survive him. He was a veteran Odd Fellow and his remains were taken to San Francisco yesterday morning, being accompanied by a committee from Sonoma Lodge, and cremated in the Odd Fellows cemetery.

Secretary's Annual Report California Home

F. A. Cromwell, Secretary and Treasurer of the Board of Managers of the California Home at Eldridge, is compiling his annual report, which will be presented to the Board at its next meeting.

The Secretary's report will show, among other things, that never before has the institution housed so many patients as at the present time and that when the buildings now in course of construction are completed the housing capacity of the Home will accommodate 150 additional patients, which now number 725.

The financial part of the report will show that the Board disbursed during the year just closed $62,247.42 for salaries and $77,065 50 for maintenance, which includes provisions and clothing.

The stock and produce raised on the Home grounds netted $11,550, and $9,450 44 was received from pay patients and other sources.

For improvements and construction $54,981.21 was disbursed by the managing Board. The report of the Secretary will also show that the institution is in a most flourishing condition and that the the past year has been a very profitable one financially.

Open Season for Deer and Dove.

The open season for deer and dove commences next Wednesday and local sportsmen are looking over their shooting irons and securing ammunition in anticipation of sport ahead. Owing to the extreme dryness of the past season and from other causes game is not as plentiful in this valley as in past seasons. The shooting area has also been greatly restricted by warning signs which have been posted on their holdings by our farmers, whom the law now protects from trespassers of all kinds. However, permission to shoot over some of these farms may be obtained from the owners by personal application. Farmers in this valley have suffered much damage in past seasons by having their premises overrun by reckless hunters and no true sportsman can attach blame to them for seeking to protect their property through the aid of warning notices.

Brief Mention,

There are 725 inmates in the California Home at Eldridge.

Mrs. Mary Murphy is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Murphy in Alameda.

Chas. Dal Poggetto has engaged the services of a first-class tonsorial artist as an assistant.

THE RACE MEET WAS A GOOD ONE.

The Sonoma Driving Club's Races on the Fourth Both Speedy and Exciting.

About five hundred spectators witnessed the Sonoma Driving Club's races in this place on the Fourth, and if speedy horses and exciting events count for anything the meet was a great success.

The first event on the card was a road race for a purse of $10. There were three entries, to-wit: Belle, Two-Step and Juda. Won by Belle in two straight heats. Time, 2 44–2.45.

The second race was for trotters or pacers of 2 40 class for a purse of $30. There were four horses in this race, which was won by Margarite in two straight heats. Time, 2.24–2.26.

The third event was a saddle horse race for a purse of $10, which was won by George Carpenter's Dan.

The Bigelow stakes, free for all trotters or pacers, for a purse of $100, brought three horses to the wire, to-wit: Myrtle, entered by M. Lonergan; Vashita, owner, W. Slattery; De Roll, entered by A. Schwartz. Myrtle won in two stright heats and copped the Bigelow mazuma in the fast time of 2 17 and 2.18.

The next event on the card was a thoroughbred race for a purse of $25. A big bunch of runners started in this race, which was won by Whiskers, entered by W. Slattery.

A trotting and pacing race, half-mile heats, best two in three, followed. In this race Jas. F. Tate's Hello Girl won the first heat and Emile Cornelius' Lena D. took the other heats and a purse of $20.

The last event on the card was a trotting or pacing race, 2.30 class, for a $50 purse. This was won by Bill Daly in 2.28 and 2.30. The first heat was scored by Sidney B.

Head-On Collision Narrowly Averted.

As the Northwestern Pacific train was on its way to this place and way stations last Sunday morning the passengers got a fright they will not soon forget. The train, consisting of fifteen passenger coaches, was crowded with people en route to various points in this valley. Upon reaching Reed's station, a few miles this side of Tiburon, the cars took the siding at that point to give the south-bound train a clear right of way, which was then due. The siding had no sooner been taken than the south-bound train was observed by those looking out of the car windows speeding along the rails at thirty miles an hour. At this moment several of the train crew were seen to jump from the Sonoma train and rush up the siding toward the on-rushing train. It was also observed that the switch to the siding was open and if it could not be reached by the train men in time to close it a frightful collision was inevitable. The switch was reached and closed, however, just about two seconds before the on-rushing south-bound thundered past.

For a few seconds there was wild excitement on the Sonoma train. Men plunged through the windows, women fainted and screamed and a panic was narrowly averted.

The cause of the switch being open is not known.

OUR VALLEY CHARMS THE NATIVE SONS.

Stanford Parlor from San Francisco Enjoy Patriotic Outing at Boyes' Springs.

The members of Stanford Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, who came to Boyes' Springs on Friday night of last week with their wives and invited guests to spend the Fourth, were delighted with their outing and spoke in glowing terms of the charms of Sonoma Valley. If dull care ever existed for any one at the springs it was driven away with the coming of the Stanford delegation, for they made their stay one round of entertainment and jollity. The two days program carried out by the committee of which Past President Schleicher was chairman and F. H. Stanle assistant, was replete with amusement and clever features. On the morning of the Fourth there was a hobo parade in which many prominent members participated.

Mr. Schleicher, the merry widow drum major, led the parade, and was followed by bass drummer Judge Caroll Cook and a retinue of grotesquely garbed Natives, who represented Uncle Sam, the Goddess of Liberty, the German baron, the Italian count, the Chinese minister and other characters.

Exercises followed the parade, Judge Flood, President of the Parlor, opening the program with appropriate remarks. Louis Crackbom was orator of the day, his oration being a masterpiece of American eloquence. The rest of the program comprised a song, "The Star Spangled Banner," by Miss Mayme Kelly, the reading of the Declaration of Independence by Arthur Morganstein, speech by Brother (Sanguinetti) McMahon, song by Mrs. Emparan, and "My Own United States," beautifully sung by Mr. Morganstein.

Director Schleicher next announced the swimming contests, which furnished great excitement for the crowds at the big tank. One of the features was the precipitation of the full-dress German Baron into the water and the consequent soaking he got.

In the evening a banquet was held in the open air dining room, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. Table fireworks added to the brilliancy of the occasion and mock fire-crackers filled with candy were presented to the ladies as souvenirs. There were songs and speechmaking and after the serving of the black coffee the merry-makers were treated to a gorgeous display of fireworks on the grounds. Dancing was later inaugurated and closed the festivities of the holiday.

The following morning a bull's head breakfast was served on the shady banks of Sonoma creek, where tables were spread and laden with barbecued meats, appetizing frijoles, etc. Here wit and repartee again flowed free and it developed that Stanford Parlor is compri-ed of more orators than any other organization in the West.

After the breakfast the Olympian games took place and entertained the crowd until 5 o'clock, when preparations began for departure. By six farewells had been said and the long-to-be-remembered time was over. The visitors departed in their autos and on the evening Northwestern Pacific train.

Death of Mrs. Bobell.

Mrs. Emma Bobell died at her home near Schellville last Wednesday after a brief illness, although she had been ailing for a long time. The deceased came here a couple of years ago with her husband, who had purchased the John Wadsworth place. She was a native of Oregon and aged 48 years.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon and the remains were laid to rest in Mountain Cemetery.

Fraternal Visit of Natives

A delegation of Native Sons from Sonoma Parlor paid a fraternal visit to Santa Rosa Parlor last Wednesday evening. The trip was made in a four-in-hand, Joe Ryan handling the ribbons. Among those in the party were Adam W. Adler, Joe Ryan, Peter Keil, Jep Valenti, Fred Marzo, Raoul Emparan, W. Hocker, Roy Pauli and Frank Weil.

The hotel has not changed hands and will continue to be conducted by the present owners, who have no particular desire to sell out the business.

His fireman, Phil Redmond, who is a nephew of the dead engineer, it is thought will also succumb to the injuries he received in the same wreck.

CLAIMS HE WAS ROBBED OF $17000.

Henry Cailleaud of Buena Vista Says that Amount is Missing from Safe Deposit Box.

Henry Cailleaud, the wealthy owner of Buena Vista ranch, two miles east of town, has complained to the San Francisco police that $17,000 has disappeared from his safe deposit box in the French-American Bank in that city. He says he discovered his loss on July 2d.

The bank officials upon being interviewed by an Index-Tribune reporter did not appear to be worried over the matter and made light of the alleged disappearance of the coin. They say it is a physical impossibility for any one but the owner to have had access to the box, and if the coin was taken out of the box it must have taken out by the owner, who may have overlooked the matter.

Cailleaud, however, is emphatic in his statement that he had been robbed and in addition to the police has employed detectives to ferret out the thief and recover the money.

Another Improvement.

Wise Talks by the Office Boy.

I've been thinking all about the things I ever heard about of a deadly nature. There's the deadly cigarette; the deadly banana peel, the deadly microbes in ice cream, the deadly toy pistol, the gun that wasn't known to be loaded; and the deadly parallel—the editor's pull on the candidates who have talked too much and forgotten what they said.

I guess there's a lot more I never heard of. But I know one thing. You can't get stung or have an accident happen to you in this store. For if you ever buy an article in this shop, and it doesn't fit or wear as it should, you can get your money back or a new article in place of it, and get it cheerfully. You are not forced to wait around, or made to feel as though the boys were doing you an enormous favor. It is a favor to my boss to hand you the square deal under any and all circumstances, without any strings to it.

POSTAGE STAMPS.

Waste and Carelessness That Enrich Uncle Sam.

"If we waste other things the way we do stamps," said a stamp clerk the other day, "we Americans are just about the most wasteful people on the face of the earth.

"Uncle Sam is much more than half a million dollars in pocket every year as a result of carelessness in the use of stamps. The government never loses anything by such carelessness and always gains.

"How many stamps do you put loose in a drawer of your desk or in a corner of your pocketbook and never think of again until you come across them aged and torn, while rummaging about months later? Then they are tossed into the wastebasket.

"Lots of people are careless about putting stamps on envelopes and paper wrappers. The result is that often before the stamp has been canceled it has fallen off and the letter is held up at the other end of the line until postage is paid.

"A great many more folks put on too much postage. They slap on two or three stamps to a package that requires only one. They are too busy or too indolent to take the trouble to have the package weighed and find out how much postage the package requires.

"If too little postage is put on a letter, Uncle Sam simply holds it up at the other end until the postage due has been paid. But if too much is put on Uncle Sam simply pockets the excess to which he is not entitled and says nothing."—Chicago Tribune.

WATCH THE CELLAR.

If Not Clean It Is a Breeding Place For Sickness.

Underground cellars ought to be done away with. They are relics of a dark age. More sickness originates in them, physicians claim, than anywhere else about the place. They cannot be kept in sanitary condition while vegetables are constantly decaying there. The place for a cellar is above ground and outside the dwelling. Leave the basement for the furnace, the coal bin and a general storeroom. An above ground cellar is more convenient in every way. Your vegetables can be stored with less than half the labor when you do not have to go up and down stairs with them. You can keep an above ground cellar clean with but little trouble, while the underground one, being difficult to get at, will be neglected nine times out of ten and allowed to become a source of infection to the family above it.

Ventilation and temperature are much more controllable in such a building than in an old fashioned underground cellar, which obliges the housewife to use up so much strength in climbing stairs. Locate it convenient to the kitchen, with which it can be connected in winter by an inclosed passageway. Watch the cellar. Remember, the doctor who immediately asked, when called to treat a case of typhoid fever, if there was decaying cabbage in the cellar. There was. Keep the cellar sweet and clean and see that it is frequently aired.—Suburban Life.

A Mountain of Alum.

In China, twelve and a half miles from the village of Liouchek, there is a mountain of alum which in addition to being a natural curiosity is a source of wealth for the inhabitants of the country, who dig from it yearly tons of alum. The mountain is not less than ten miles in circumference at its base and has a height of 1,940 feet. The alum is obtained by quarrying large blocks of stone, which are first heated in great furnaces and then in vats filled with boiling water. The alum crystallizes out and forms a layer about six inches in thickness. This layer is subsequently broken up into blocks weighing about ten pounds each.

Travel as Teacher.

"Travel forms the young" is a French proverb. So it does, and it also helps a teacher to become formative. Travel is good for teachers professionally, because travel is a teacher itself. But travel is good for everybody who is hale and sane. "There's fools o' fowk what never haves their toes off their doorsteps, little brother," a gypsy said to me forty years ago. I am glad I have never been one of those.—J. H. Yoxall, M. P., in T. P.'s Weekly.

Not Superstitious.

"Do you believe in ghosts?" asked the man who resents all superstition.

"No, suh," answered Erastus Pinkley. "An' all I's hopin' is dat dem ghos'es will lemme stay dat way 'stid o' comin' aroun' tryin' to convince me."—Washington Star.

A Different Proposition.

Pompous Director (hotly)—Why did you refuse to give my son a fair chance to show what he could do? Don't you believe in introducing young blood in the business? Superintendent—I do, but not young bloods.—Puck.

Outspoken.

Mrs. Garrulous—I was outspoken in my sentiments at the club this afternoon. Her Husband—I can't believe you. Who outspoke you, my dear?—London Mail.

Happy is the man who does all the good he talks of.—Italian Proverb.

The Senate Band.

The press gallery of the senate does not look unlike a band stand, with its elaborately decorated front, and it is never occupied by the scribes prior to the opening of the proceedings. A young lady seated in the gallery opposite the press gallery had been looking intently at the empty seats for quite awhile. Her curiosity got the better of her, and, going to the doorkeeper, she said, "Mister, will you please tell me when the band begins to play?" The doorkeeper was amazed. "No band will play, miss," said that gentleman. "There is no band. Why do you ask?"

The young lady looked disappointed and embarrassed when she said, with hesitation, "Isn't that the band stand?" pointing to the press gallery.—Washington Herald.

Bray's Mythical Vicar.

It is curious to reflect that there are scattered about the world many scores of places whose chief claim to distinction consists in their association with some famous ditty or other. Take, for example, the village of Bray, in Berkshire, always associated with the world famous "Vicar of Bray." The most curious part of the business is that, though Fuller, in his "Worthies of England," asserts that the cleric who is the hero of the song was one Simon Alleyn, careful search of the parish registers has failed to substantiate the story.—London Musical Home Journal.

A Strenuous Task.

"Your honor," said the witness, "can't you order a recess?"

"A recess?"

"Yes, sir. I've stood on this stand and told the whole truth two hours on a stretch, and I'm tectotally wore out! I never told the truth that long before—not in all my life!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Shattered Hopes.

He (anxiously)—I understand your father speaks very highly of me? She—Yes, but he doesn't mean a word of it. He—Are you sure of that? She—Certainly. He does it just to torment mother.—Chicago News.

An Eyewitness.

"Have you any witnesses of the accident?" asked the Brentford county court judge recently.

"Yes," was the reply, "my uncle. He is not here because he is blind."—London Telegraph.

Take Care of the Pennies, Etc.

"Make anything on that deal?" Gobsa Golde inquired.

"Only a million," Myduss gloomily replied.

"Well, every million counts."—New York Press.

The Rubicon.

The Rubicon was the small stream separating ancient Italy from Cisalpine Gaul, the province which had been allotted to Caesar. When Caesar crossed this stream at the head of an armed force he passed beyond the limits of his own province and legally became an invader of Italy.

Merely a Sample.

"What is the matter, little boy?" asked the professor. "Have you the measles?"

"Nope," answered the boy. "I've got the measle. They's only one of 'em."

"That's singular!" mused the professor.—Chicago Tribune.

As Arranged For Older Children.

Miss Mary was the possessor of a diminutive and immature specimen of the Ovis aires, a wool bearing and ruminant quadruped, whose flesh is highly esteemed by persons to whose gustatory organs its flavor is agreeable.

The shaggy and agglomerated filaments constituting in their collective capacity its natural outer covering, integument or garment presented to the vision a surface absolutely etiolated and albified and rivaling in immaculateness the lustrous mantle of crystallized vapor that commonly characterizes the winter landscape.

And to whatsoever locality, contiguous or remote, whither Mary's vagrant fancy, the call of duty or, perchance, the parental mandate impelled her, when not otherwise engaged, to betake herself, this juvenescent representative of the genus Ovis aires, with a fidelity remarkable in one so immature and inexperienced, could be counted upon with absolute and entire certainty to accompany her.—Chicago Tribune.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

THE BADGE OF HONESTY

The above illustration represents the several native medicinal plants which enter into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Stands Alone The one and only medicine for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, the ingredients of which are printed and placed upon every bottle wrapper leaving the great laboratory in Buffalo, N. Y., where it is made, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Stands Alone Not only in respect to its known composition, but also as the only specific advertised remedy for women's diseases which absolutely contains no alcohol.

It Stands Alone As the one medicine for women, the makers of which take their patients fully into their confidence and tell them exactly what they are taking. This Dr. Pierce can afford to do because his "Favorite Prescription" is made of such ingredients, and after a working formula that has thousands of cures to its credit—thus placing its merits above criticism.

It Stands Alone As nature's cure for the diseases peculiar to women, and is composed of Golden Seal root, Blue Cohosh root, Unicorn root, Black Cohosh root, Lady's Slipper root and chemically pure glycerine of proper strength, to extract and preserve the medicinal principles residing in the roots employed, for any length of time in any climate. It is scientifically prepared by experienced chemists and pharmacists at the laboratory of the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

In the early sixties it was usually the duty of a practicing physician to ride many miles every day on his regular round of visits upon his patients. In those days a young man who had received a careful medical training in one of the best colleges of that day was accustomed to ride ten, twenty, and often thirty miles or more, visiting the sick and afflicted. His success was soon phenomenal. Doctors and families called him for consultation to towns at considerable distances by rail. He became especially noted in the cure of obstinate and distressing diseases of women. He had early discovered that by combining the extracts of certain native medicinal plants in just the right proportion, without the use of alcohol, his "Prescription" almost invariably cured such cases. Later, in order to place this remedy before the public in a shape easily to be procured, he established a laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., where regularly qualified chemists and pharmacists were put in charge to accurately prepare his "Prescription" and put it in shape for shipment. This remedy, which he named Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, is not a "patent medicine," but is a real prescription of a real physician in a real practice, and hence the name.
